ABOUT THE STUDY

PURPOSE

Emotional vulnerability influences how people build relationships, cope with challenges, and understand themselves. This study aims to develop a validated psychological assessment tool to measure emotional vulnerability in formerly incarcerated adults.

POTENTIAL IMPACT

- Support reentry efforts by providing a tool that address emotional needs, promoting stability and reducing recidivism.
- Inform legal decisions by providing insight that can guide sentencing and parole boards toward more individualized outcomes.
- Promote alternatives to incarceration by showing how emotional support can be a foundation for healing.
- Enhance therapy by helping clinicians better understand and respond to justice-impacted clients.
- Track growth by offering a way to measure emotional progress and healing over time, supporting long-term success.

CONFIDENTIALITY & ETHICS

- Surveys are entirely anonymous
- Data is stored in a password-protected system & only the researchers will have access to the data
- Information will be used exclusively for research purposes
- Participation is voluntary and can be stopped at any time
- While time and contribution are valued, no payment is available for participation, at this time.
